such a struggle for supremacy had been inevitable.

From that struggle two proud and kindred aces, he said, would grow in mutual respect, appreciation and lasting friendship. "Victor and vanquished," said Mr. Chamberlain, "bravely played their parts. We scorn to glory in our triumph; the enemy need fear no humiliations in their defeat. Let us see, as Britons worthy of the name, that nothing be done to revive the animosities of the past. 'We must give our new fellow-subjects equality of position with ourselves. We ask, however, something in return; it is with them that the issue lies. We hold out our hand and ask them to take it without thought of the past, but frankly and in the spirit in which it is effered." Mr. Chamberlain elaborated his theme with eloquence and was loudly cheered. He announced incidentally the acceptance of the Boer offer to fight in Somailland.
